A Lover's Affair

Synopsis:

A married couple, Henry and Emma are sat down at their dinning table at home having dinner. Henry and Emma start to talk about the day they had at work. Henry is stressed out because of a presentation he has in the morning with a client. Emma comforts Henry, assuring him everything will work out well. Henry receives a phone call and decides to answer it in another room. Emma seems a bit sceptical as to why Henry did not answer the call in front of her, yet she decides to ignore it and give him space. Henry returns to the dinning room and seems a bit tense. Emma asks him if everything is okay, he replies angrily that it is, and tells her to stop nagging him. Later on the couple are in their bedroom. Emma is doing her nightly routine. Henry is laying down fidgeting, seeming tense. Henry's receiving text messages, but he is ignore them. Emma looks at Henry sceptical as to why he is receiving texts this late at night, and why he is ignoring them. Emma decides not to overthink it or jump to conclusions, she assumes that he wants to relax in bed rather than be disturbed. Emma then lays beside Henry, she starts to try and comfort him, assuming that he is still stressed out about the presentation. Henry decides to give her his back and closes his eyes to sleep. We see Emma upset because of how distant Henry's being.

The next morning, the couple are sat down in the kitchen having breakfast, and drinking coffee. Emma asks Henry how he feels about his presentation, however, he starts to get very frustrated for absolutely no reason, and asks to be left alone. Emma decides to give him space, she starts walking to the living room to finish her coffee, and is interrupted by a ring at the door. Emma goes to Henry to inform him that the doorbell rang, she expressed that she is concerned why anyone would come this early in the morning to visit, and that it must be something important. Henry tells Emma to stay put and that he will go answer the door. When Henry arrives, he is shocked to see who was at the door. Emma tries taking a sneak peak to see who he is talking to, she can't see anything though. Emma hears Henry's voice get louder, so she decides to go and check it out. As Emma is walking there, she hears a woman's voice. When Emma arrives, she gets frustrated when she sees that Henry's ex girlfriend, Molly was at the door. Molly apologises to Emma saying she did not know that they were still together, and explains that she was thought they had broken up. Emma asks Molly to leave.

Henry and Emma are sat down in their living room. Emma asks Henry why Molly was here. He tells her not to worry, they were just catching up. Emma confronts Henry and asks for the truth, she asks why would Molly assume they had broken up, and if he cheated on her. Henry starts to cry and apologises, he tells Emma that he got Molly pregnant. The couple get in a huge argument, and Emma asks for him to leave the house and stay elsewhere for a while. A couple of weeks pass by and Emma asks Henry to come and see her. Emma tells Henry that she wants to file for a divorce, and that she never wants to see his face again. The film ends with Henry sat down at their home expressionless.