Synopsis:

The main character, Henry is walking around his university campus. As Henry is walking, many people keep on greeting him. Henry approaches his friend group at the smoking area on campus. As he is standing with his friends, many people keep greeting him. His friends look at each other with an annoyed look. Henry then tells his group of friends that he will catch up with them later.

After Henry leaves, his friend group are talking about how Henry thinks he's the centre of attention, and that they are sick of it. They are plotting a way to make his life miserable. They start whispering into a bunch of people's ears.

Later on, Henry is walking around campus, this time people are looking at him in an unfriendly way, some turn around and start whispering. Whenever he greets anyone, they just look away and ignore him, squinting their eyes. Henry approaches his friend group upset, wanting support and comfort. Instead, his friend group start telling her that not everything is about him, and that he should stop thinking he's the centre of the attention. They tell him to stop acting like a princess, and to stop being so full of himself. Henry then gets really upset, he tells his friends that he will catch up with them later.

A while later, Henry is in his room and he decides to call his mother, who is too busy to answer his call. Henry looks outside his window and closes his eyes, he then has a flashback of some of his memories with his friends; having picnics, laughing, and so on. Henry then goes to his bathroom and looks at his reflection in the mirror. He feels hesitant about hurting himself, he feels like he has nobody in this world but himself, which makes him feel depressed and suicidal. He then closes his eyes, takes a deep breathe, and decides to go for a walk.

A few minutes later, Henry starts walking and is listening to music. He sits on a bench and pauses his music, takes out his book, and starts to read. Henry is approached by his group of friends, who decide to mockingly ask him if she's taken off her tiara yet. Henry decides to ignore them and walk away.

In the end, we see Henry in a field of Dandelion where he is surrounded by nature. The film ends with Henry walking away into the distance alone with nobody by his side, whilst the song "Dandelions" by Ruth B. Plays in the background.
